Introduction to the 2019 vintage

The way in which the Bordeaux 2019 En Primeur unfolded may have been highly unusual, but there is no doubt about the brilliant quality of the wines, or about the extremely attractive release prices from many top châteaux. Even the most grudging critics of the en primeur system concede that in this year, Bordeaux "got it right".

We usually pride ourselves on taking a view early in the campaign, based on tasting hundreds of wines and conversations with the winemakers and châteaux owners. For obvious reasons, this year our appreciation of the vintage has had to be a movable feast, evolving as each new cask sample arrived at the office. Gradually we have formed an understanding what an elegant and vibrant vintage this is, despite the warm summer in 2019.

Our full & final 2019 En Primeur Offer now includes all of those wines we particularly recommend; a little over eighty châteaux, including over forty crus classés (around two-thirds of the total) and a further forty cru bourgeois, right bank wines and deuxièmes vins. Hopefully, this puts the enthusiasm of the notes into context! These are in our opinion a selection of the very best wines, from an excellent vintage, from possibly the world's greatest wine region.

Growing season & effect on the vintage

The question raised by so many wines we tasted was "how can such an elegant, balanced wine be made in such a warm year?". Early on in the process, we expected each sample to show aromas of prune or fig, or a kind of 'hot' character to the alcohol indicating lack of integration, but on the contrary, sample after sample proved to be fresh and aromatically complex with excellent acidity.

Gradually, with more and more tasting, we have gained a sense of how the weather shaped the vintage. Each year, with advancing technology, analysis of the growing season grows more complex. This year we have even begun to receive reports from a satellite telecommunications company who have branched out into analysis of classic wine regions. More detailed information is available than ever before, both to winemakers and to the trade, so we offer just a summary of the key points.

The early part of the growing season saw far fewer extreme weather events than 2018, with frost damage and mildew far less prevalent, resulting in a clean, healthy crop. This was not a heatwave year in the sense of 2003 (with sustained extreme temperatures without relief) but a year which saw some intense heat spikes, mitigated by a later start to ripening and some very useful rainfall at key times, namely in June, July and just before harvest time.

RICHARD KIHLL LTD

Established 1969

Record readings on the car dashboard thermometer from last summer may stick in the memory, but in the terms which matter to the vines (i.e. 'average heat accumulation days') 2019 scored lower than 2018. The first of those heat spikes was in June, before ripening had even begun. Add to this the healthiness of the crop and we have a year with wonderful ripeness levels and an aromatic complexity to the fruit which will probably prove to be the defining characteristic of the vintage.

Excellent vintages seem almost miraculously to come in pairs (e.g. 1995 /'96, 2005/'06, 09' /'10, '15/'16) and this is no coincidence. The reproductive cycle of the vine is spread over two years and in a good growing season, the vines will take the opportunity to produce embryonic buds both for the current year and for the next, so potential was already developing during the 2018 growing season.

The hot summer of 2018 was accompanied by low rainfall and a reduced harvest due to frost and mildew, concentrating the fruit at many properties. It was a 'winemakers' vintage', the challenge being to handle the fruit to extract its enormous potential. Despite casual similarities with 2018 and despite less rain overall, in 2019 there was just enough rain (as in 2009, '10 and '16) which fell at just the right time. Writing for Jancisrobinson.com, Gavin Quinney's prediction in November last year seems pretty spot-on to us:

"Stylistically, based on this, it would be no surprise if 2019 ended up as a mythical blend of 2012, 2014 and 2016, with a little 2015 thrown in...the charm and drinkability of the 2012s, the straightness and classicism of the 2014s, the freshness and fruity appeal of the 2016s, and the warmth of 2015."

Rather than the very interventionist winemaking of 2018, 2019 was a year in which winemakers needed to decide "when to act and when to do nothing" (Lisa Perotti-Brown MW, The Wine Advocate).

2019 Château Beaumont, Haut-Médoc Cru Bourgeois

£100 IB / doz

"The 2019 Beaumont impresses on the nose with intense blackberry and briary aromas, sous-bois and tobacco, all whilst maintaining its delineation. The palate is supple and silky on the entry. There is well judged acidity, plenty of cedar and seaweed, tinged black fruit and a spicy finish. Now, this is a bloody great Beaumont. 91-93 pts." NM

2019 Château Cantemerle, Grand Cru Classé Haut-Médoc

2019 Domaine de Cambes, Bordeaux (Limited)

(80% Merlot, 20% Cabernet Franc) | 100% new oak. Tremendous freshness to the red fruits on the nose with more black fruits on the palate. Velvet-textured, tasted after Le Tertre but not over-shadowed by it. Some very appealing toasted notes from the oak, but also some caramelised Maillard reaction notes, probably intentional, nevertheless all remarkably in balance. Quite unique. RKL
